Dixie. The Lottery Man.

OSBORNE'S Dan Cupid company arrived in town yesterday after a tedious trip from eastern part of Pennsylvania, and this morning the baggage and scenery are being placed in the Hippodrome. While most of the company are probably new to this city, it doesn't require a second look to recognize the face of Jack Lamar among the photos which adorn the cases in front of the theatre. Jack was here last summer with Billy Malone so long that he feels he is back home, and quite a number of friends will be glad to see him again. The show comes here with some pretty flattering press notices.

Success on Stage and Screen.

Rida Johnson Young wrote "The Lottery Man," which had such great success as a stage play, appearing both at the Grand and at the Hippodrome. The film version is said to be equally interesting and is being seen at the Dixie today and tomorrow.

Light Comedy at Nelson.

There is more than one bright idea in "Leave It To Me," which Nelson has on today. The story has many of the elements of a corking good farce-comedy or light comedy, one in which the main idea need not be taken seriously. Wherever the director leaves it to the spectator to see the joke by suggesting the effect is one which will evoke laughter. There is an attempt, however, to disregard the story's amusing features for the sake of such extraneous matter as bathing scenes, which have nothing to do with the story development. Posing of this kind and that of an obscure chase in an automobile is far from comedy and of no particular interest. It is true material and its development that count.

William Russell makes good use of his chance when he is well in the foreground, where the revelation of his perplexities can be easily seen.

Indian Life Finely Pictured.

The motive of "The Third Woman," at the Princess tonight assumes a racial prejudice against intermarriage with Indians, though it would seem to be a matter of individual taste. The leading character is a half-breed, played by Carlyle. His father is a man of high intelligence and social station, yet his wife was a full-blooded Indian. The half-breed son marries a white girl in the end. The prejudice is individual as against individuals. It is a matter of natural selection.

While the subject matter lacks vital interest and the story is not told in dramatic form, the treatment is picturesque, highly so, in that portion portraying Pueblo life. It not only shows how the modern Indian differs from the conventional one of moving pictures, but touches him with new and romantic interest. Some of the camera views of the Pueblo village and tribe are veritable works of art. They are far more beautiful and impressive than any painting of the subject ever shown.

Carlyle Blackwell has a difficult role, one whose sympathetic appeal is very slender, but he carries it with dignity, and he puts up a mighty struggle when called upon to display physical prowess. The three ladies who "come into his life" typify the modern beauty of social aspirations, the humble Indian maiden and the plain little American home girl. It is made obvious from the beginning that the latter is to be "The Third Woman," thus depriving the story of any element of suspense.

CLOSE UPS.

—Alfred Hickman, who is supporting Elaine Hammerstein in "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes" was the original little Blithe in the original production of Trilby, done at the Garden theatre in New York on April 15, 1919. Another claim to fame is that he is the husband of Nance O'Neil, the tragedienne of the spoken drama.

—Edith Haller in "Children of Destiny" wears a stunning evening wrap of blue and gold brocade, edged with heavy gold fringe and trimmed with long, important tassels of gold cord. It is lined with flesh colored chiffon.

—"Kid" Coster, one of the best known "second agents" in show business was in Fairmont a few hours Saturday on his way into Pittsburgh for Sunday. He is in advance of "In Old Kentucky," which is now in the films, and comes to the Dixie theatre week of May 17. Mr. Coster will return here Wednesday and get busy with the advertising, in which he will have the assistance of Robert Fisher.

Locals Won.

The Consumers' Fuel company baseball team defeated the Elm Grove club at Blackshore park here yesterday by the score of four to three, in a rather featureless game. Shaulie was in the box for the locals and was in danger in but one inning, the second, in which the visitors made two singles, a triple, accepted one free pass and a hit batsman, and in which they made all their runs. The Consumers, in the fourth

Visiting Aviator
Spent Night Here.

It is a small world after all, as Lloyd O. Yost, aviator who dropped in on Fairmont unexpectedly Saturday afternoon and started for Uniontown yesterday morning, found out. Coach Boyer, of Fairview High school, also comes from Myerstown, Pa., the home of Yost, and they were school chums at that place in their boyhood. Yost picked Ursinus as his college while Boyer went to Albright. They had not seen each other for some time, and there was a happy meeting for both of them when Boyer rushed in from Fairview Saturday afternoon when he found out Yost was in town.

Aviator Yost and Coach Boyer were guests at dinner Saturday evening at the H. B. Barnes residence in Edgemont. Saturday evening the aviator was shown Adams street, Fairmont's "Great White Way," in all its splendor, and was entertained in a delightful manner. Yost is a delightful fellow, and he had a hard time Saturday evening, as he was forced to tell of his adventures in flying everywhere he went.

How to Gain Flesh.

A simple but sure way to increase the weight, it is asserted by several well known physicians, is to take regularly for several months, one or two grain hypo-nutrient tablets after each meal. These little tablets have the distinguished merit of increasing the red and white blood corpuscles, aiding digestion and promoting assimilation and absorption of the elements in the food which go to make blood and solid tissues. They are obtainable in sealed packages from well stocked apothecary shops.
